Tina: An energetic woman in her late 20s.

Sarah: Tina's best friend

Tina and Sarah run to the corner store to grab a pack of cigarettes. Tina decides to buy a scratch off lottery ticket and scratches it off in the store.

SARAH: I don't know why you're bothering with that.

TINA: With what?

SARAH: That lottery ticket. No one ever wins the "big prize."

TINA: (Giggles) Oh well, it's still fun to play. And I've won a few bucks off these before.

SARAH: Yeah? How much? Like five dollars at the most?

TINA: Yes, matter of fact. Something like that.

SARAH: I still think it's a waste of time and money. If you get those everyday, it really adds up.

TINA: Well I don't get them every day. Besides, it shouldn't matter; I'm getting it anyway.

SARAH: Whatever, you'll just be disappointed when you don't win anything. (Smirks at Tina)

TINA: Why don't you just get one?

SARAH: Didn't I just say it was a waste of money?

TINA: Yeah, but it's still fun, I'm telling you! It's exciting.

SARAH: If I get one will you stop talking about it?

TINA: Deal.

Tina takes the two lottery tickets from the cashier and hands one to Sarah. Tina uses a quarter to scratch it off from the change she got back, and Sarah pulls out a penny from her purse. Tina scratches off her numbers and finds that she won ten dollars.

TINA: Well it isn't the jackpot, but I still won ten dollars. That's the most I've won so far. See? You can still win a decent amount of money. Did you win anything?

SARAH: (Stares blankly at her ticket and whispers.) I won.

TINA: What?

SARAH: (whispering) I won.

TINA: I really can't hear you.

SARAH: (Gradually getting louder.) I won... I won! Oh my God, Tina I won!

TINA: What? You won? How much did you win?

Sarah's hands are trembling as she hands her ticket to Tina. Tina notices that Sarah's ticket says she won $500,000.

TINA: Oh my God, you won!

SARAH: Ahhh! I can't believe it! Tina I actually won!

TINA: You know, if it weren't for me, you wouldn't have won.

SARAH: Oh, pish posh. This isn't because of you. This is my ticket and I won!

People in the corner store continue to stare at the two ladies and keep their distance.

TINA: So what are you going to do?

SARAH: I don't know. I'm rich! There's so much to do! I'm going to junk my piece of shit car, and get a corvette. Maybe I'll; move to California or something and get a place out there. Or I can just travel the world and go on a shopping spree in Milan! I'm so excited! Of course I'll take you with me wherever I go.

TINA: (Rolls her eyes) Gee, thanks. Can we just leave now?

SARAH: Fine, fine. But I still want to go get that corvette.

The girls decide to leave the corner store and cash out their lottery tickets to go shopping.
